BRITISH MEDICINE
Published with the support of the Royal Society of Medicine

Editor: A. Swan

Pergamon Press plc, Headington Hill Hall,
Oxford OX3 0BW, U.K.

Aims and Scope

The aim of BRITISH MEDICINE is to provide a guide to new books and non-book materials, pamphlets, official publications, brochures and reports by research institutions and voluntary societies; to list the main contents of current issues of British medical periodicals and to note forthcoming international congresses.

This is not a selective bibliographical tool as the aim is to put forward readers materials reflecting the medical work being done in Britain. Thus recent works on psychology, nursing, radiological protection, public health and social welfare and other subjects of interest to clinicians, research workers, administrators and ancillary workers will be included, as will popular health education material.

BRITISH MEDICINE does not cover every work published during the month preceding each issue; publications are included only after they have been examined by the editors. Books that are not seen on publication may be entered at a later date. Inclusion does not imply recommendation; similarly exclusion does not imply criticism. Every effort will be made to provide as complete coverage as possible.
